PORTOBELLO

Is a town, parliamentary burgh and a fashionable watering place, on the south side of the Firth of Forth, in the parish of Edinburgh; the town is 3 miles east from Edinburgh by road, and has two stations, one near the centre of the town and another at Joppa, on the Berwick and Carlisle section of the North British railway. It was created a burgh in 1833, and from that date until 1895 was governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and nine councillors; but under the provisions of the "Edinburgh Extension Act, 1896" (59 and 60 Vict. c. 203), amalgamating the burgh of Portobello with the city and royal burgh of Edinburgh, it now forms, both municipally and for police purposes, part of the royal burgh, and with certain other districts subsequently annexed forms a ward of the city for municipal purposes, returning three members to the Town Council. As, however, Portobello is about three miles from the east end of Princes street and about a mile and a half from the nearest suburban streets at Piershill, it is practically a separate town, having an individuality and history of its own. As a town it has risen to its present importance with singular rapidity; towards the close of the 18th century the ground which it occupies was an unproductive waste along the shore, overspread with whins and bent, the only dwellings here consisting of a thatched hut of two rooms, which stood until 1862, when it was pulled down to make room for the Town Hall, and one or two shepherds' shealings, the hut being used as a hostelry, or half-way house, for travellers taking the shore road from Musselburgh to Edinburgh. The town, which continues to increase in size and importance and has a population of over 9,000, now consists principally of one main street, the High street, 1¼ miles in length, which forms a part of the highway from Edinburgh to London, and includes Joppa, now practically a part of the town; branching off right and left are other streets with terraces, squares &c. the houses in most of which have gardens in front. There are several hotels. The beach, a noble expanse of pure smooth sand, affords safe and convenient bathing at all times of the tide, and there is also a suite of warm salt water baths. The Marine Promenade, laid out by the Town Council, is a broad thoroughfare, a mile and a quarter in length, stretching along the sea beach, and in the centre stands the Prince of Wales's Fountain, an ornamental structure for drinking purposes. The pier, 1,250 feet long, has seats for 2,000 persons, and a spacious saloon with pavilion above, in which concerts are held twice daily during the summer months. Water of excellent quality is supplied in abundance at high pressure, and the houses and streets are lighted with gas and electricity. A large sum of money has also been expended on the drainage of the town, which is now thorough and complete. Considerable trade is done in the manufacture of paper, bottles, pottery, earthenware, bricks and tiles, and at Joppa there are salt works.

Conjointly with Leith and Musselburgh, Portobello comprises the Leith parliamentary district, constituted in 1833, under the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 Wm. IV. c. 45), and returning one member.

On the south side of the railway is a park of over 45 acres, laid out in 1899, with broad walks and belts of trees, sufficient space being assigned for golf and other games. Marine baths were erected in 1901 on the Promenade at the foot of Melville street, at a cost of about £30,000, affording hot and cold baths both of salt and fresh water. There is a large influx of visitors during the summer months, Portobello being very conveniently situated as regards railway communication, not only with Edinburgh and the west of Scotland, but with the south. The quoad sacra parish of Portobello was formed from the civil parishes of Duddingston and South Leith. The church was erected in 1809, as a chapel of ease, subordinate to the kirk session of Duddingston, and the Rev. John Glen continued to be the minister until the disruption of 1843. The Episcopal Church of St. Mark, built in 1828, will seat 464 persons: the rectory, net value £278, has been held since 1905 by the Rev. H. S. Reid, M.A. of Glasgow University. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. Three weekly newspapers are published here, viz.:—"The Edinburgh Citizen and Portobello Advertiser," "The Midlothian Journal" and the "Musselburgh News," all on Friday. The scenery surrounding the town is varied—on one side is the noble estuary of the Forth, with the island of Inchkeith, the hills of Fife and Kinross, the fertile lands of East Lothian, Fawside Castle, Troplainlaw and North Berwick Law, and in the distance the Bass Rock, and on the other side are Arthur's Seat, Craigmillar Castle and the Pentland Hills. The Duke of Abercorn K.G., P.C., C.B. the trustees of the late Sir James Percy Miller bart. D.L., J.P. of Manderston (d. 1906), and the trustees of the late Wakefield Christie Miller esq. (d. 1898) are the principal landowners.

Joppa, before mentioned as intimately connected with and now a part of the town of Portobello, is of modern growth. Its salt works and quarries have been wrought for many years, but the latter are now worked out. Coal at one time was found in great abundance; but in consequence of the flooding of the pits, which stood near the sea, in 1790, the works have been entirely abandoned. From its proximity to the beach and rocks, Joppa is a favourite resort of summer visitors.

The rateable value is £106,236; the population in 1901 was 12,659.
